

Webinar on

Implementing a Project Management Culture

Learning Objectives

- What exactly is Project Management (PM)?*
- What are the three areas of PM to be implemented?*
- How can you define the maturity of PM in your organization?*
- Where do you start in getting a strong PM culture implemented?*
- What are the next steps in transforming your organization?*
- What are the next steps to maintaining your personal momentum?*

As organizations strengthen and mature, the gap between the business objectives and technical solutions tends to widen, the knowledge and skill sets become more specific (and different).

PRESENTED BY:

Chris holds degrees in management studies and organizational behavior from Boston University. He has traveled to 22 countries and 47 states in the course of his career.

On-Demand Webinar

Duration : 60 Minutes

Price: $200

Webinar Description

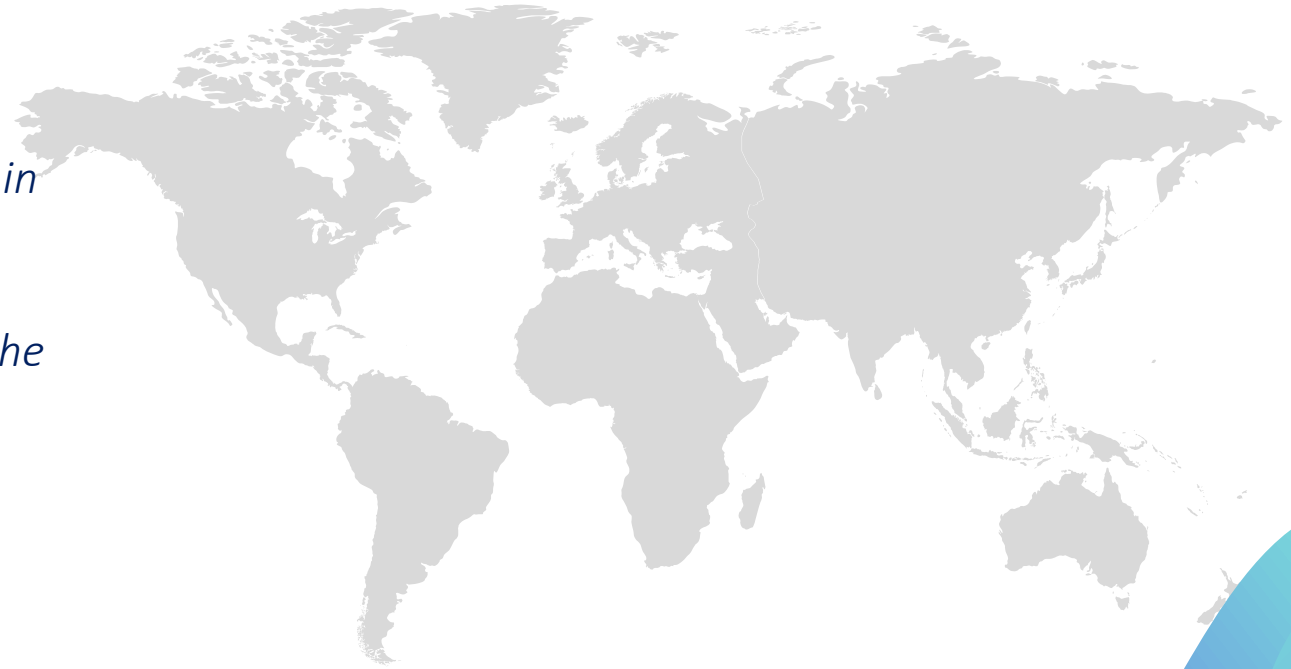

As organizations strengthen and mature, the gap between the business objectives and technical solutions tends to widen, the knowledge and skill sets become more specific (and different).

Project Management is a strong bridge between these teams. It may not be an objective to become a "Project Manager" yet every employee in your organization does project management - completing a defined task by a certain time, to a specified quality level. Imagine if every employee took ownership of the tasks that they are undertaking.

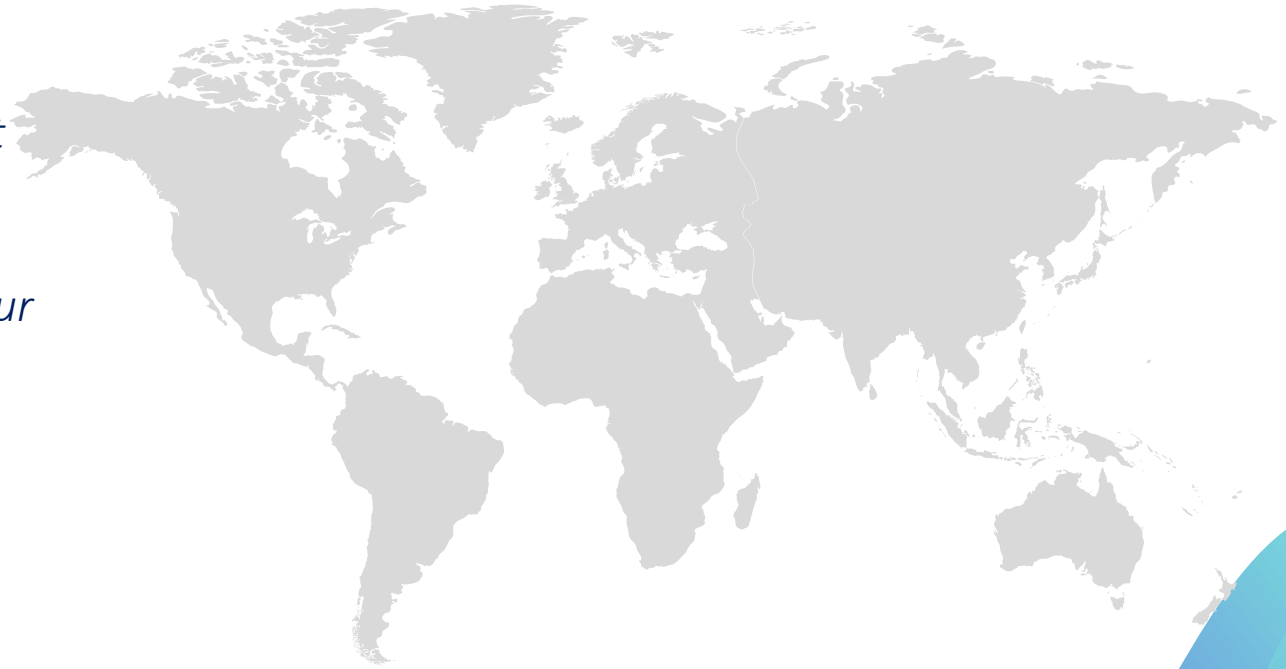

Who Should Attend ?

If you are a member of an organization that is realizing the importance of project management in day-to-day activities, this webinar is for you. Leaders at all levels walk away with some immediate actions to put in place to strengthen the teams you are responsible for.

Why Should Attend ?

The great thing about Project Management is that it is a differentiator. Whether you are a trainer, software developer, or accountant, with project management you can put a framework around your activities, differentiate yourself from the rest.

To register please visit:

www.grceducators.com
support@grceducators.com
740 870 0321