Webinar Description

Tracking compares what actually happens during your project against what was planned.

Protect your well-planned project from becoming a disaster!

Thorough project planning is essential, however keeping your project on track is critical and often more challenging.

After planning, reality sets in, bringing likely risks, delays, and budget blow-outs. To effectively manage a project, you must regularly monitor actual project progress against your planned schedule and to make adjustments where necessary. Commercially this is vital as most projects will have an approved budget, duration and quality standards.

A project manager is responsible to ensure compliance with the plan, budgets, standards, and delivery dates.
