Webinar Description

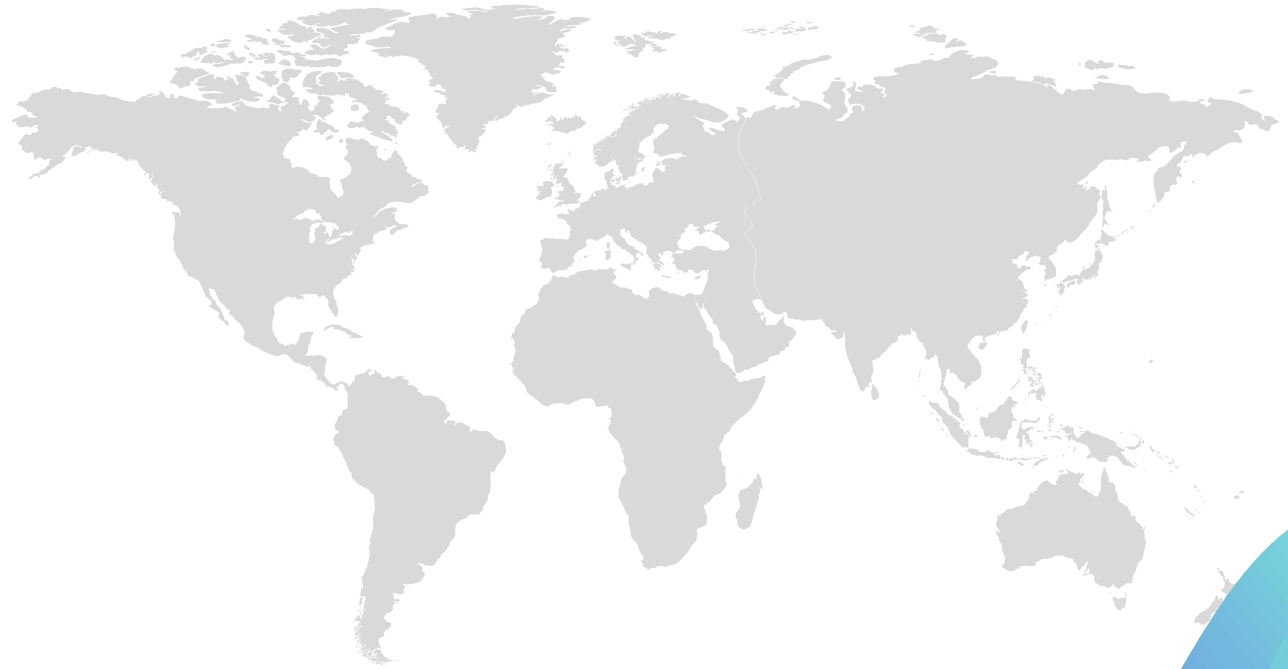

This is an introductory seminar that covers topics related to the prevention and resolution of conflicts. It includes an introduction to conflicts; definitions, types, and potential consequences. It also includes important tips for preventing/avoiding conflicts, as well as resolving them in the most effective manner when they happen. It goes on to describe important conflict management skills along with examples and applications.

Conflicts arise every day between different parties; individuals, teams, and organizations. These conflicts take a heavy toll on us: Our business, our relationships, and our own quality of life. This seminar will focus on two aspects: preventing conflicts (before they happen) and resolving them efficiently (when they happen). It is particularly important for the project management team.

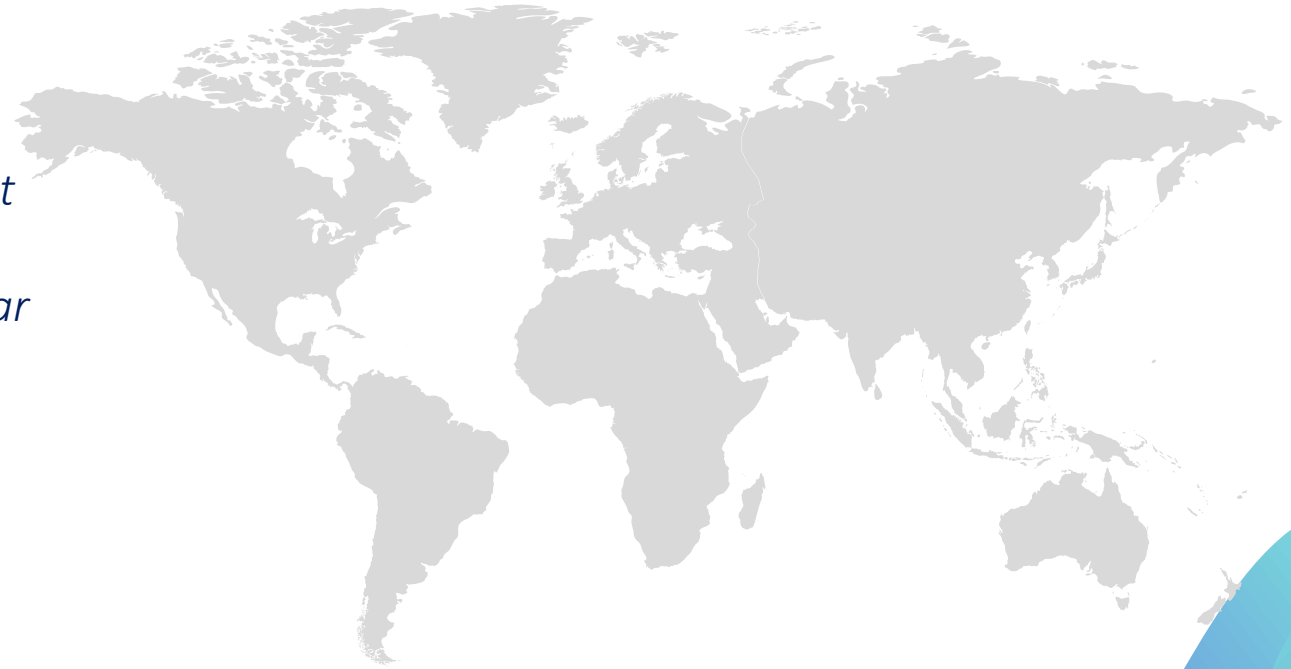

Who Should Attend ?

Everyone: Architects, engineers (of all disciplines), contractors, subcontractors, project managers, cost / quantity estimators, project management team members, attorneys/lawyers, executives

Why Should Attend ?

This seminar provides important hints for the project management team and everyone else, that can make a big difference for the success; both on the personal and organizational levels. The seminar includes tips and hints for preventing/avoiding conflicts, as well as to resolve them in the most effective manner when they happen. One simple step that takes very little time and cost little or nothing, can have a profound impact on the outcomes of the project and the business in general.
