Webinar Description

Documenting events is a crucial task, and in some cases not documenting them can lead to grim consequences. For example, did you know that not keeping track of employee's hours is fatal to overtime cases? Sometimes you might be documenting items, but focusing on the wrong items. In this training program, the webinar instructor will discuss what needs to be documented and what should be documented that strengthens employers' defenses in the event lawsuits are filed.

Who Should Attend ?

Compliance Officers, Human Resources, CFOs

Office Managers, Company Presidents

Employers and Business Owners

Hiring Managers

HR Managers/Supervisors

In-House Counsel

Why Should Attend ?

How can a company defend itself once it has been sued by a former employee? This webinar will reverse engineer the process - it will look at problems that arise in the courtroom when defense attorneys do not have the proper documents to defend the company, and what goes right when they do have the proper documents. Through this process, attendees will learn what needs to be kept and what should be kept to best defend and protect the company in the event of an employee lawsuit for overtime (FLSA), Title VII (discrimination) FMLA and ADA and Defend Trade Secrets Act.
