Webinar Description

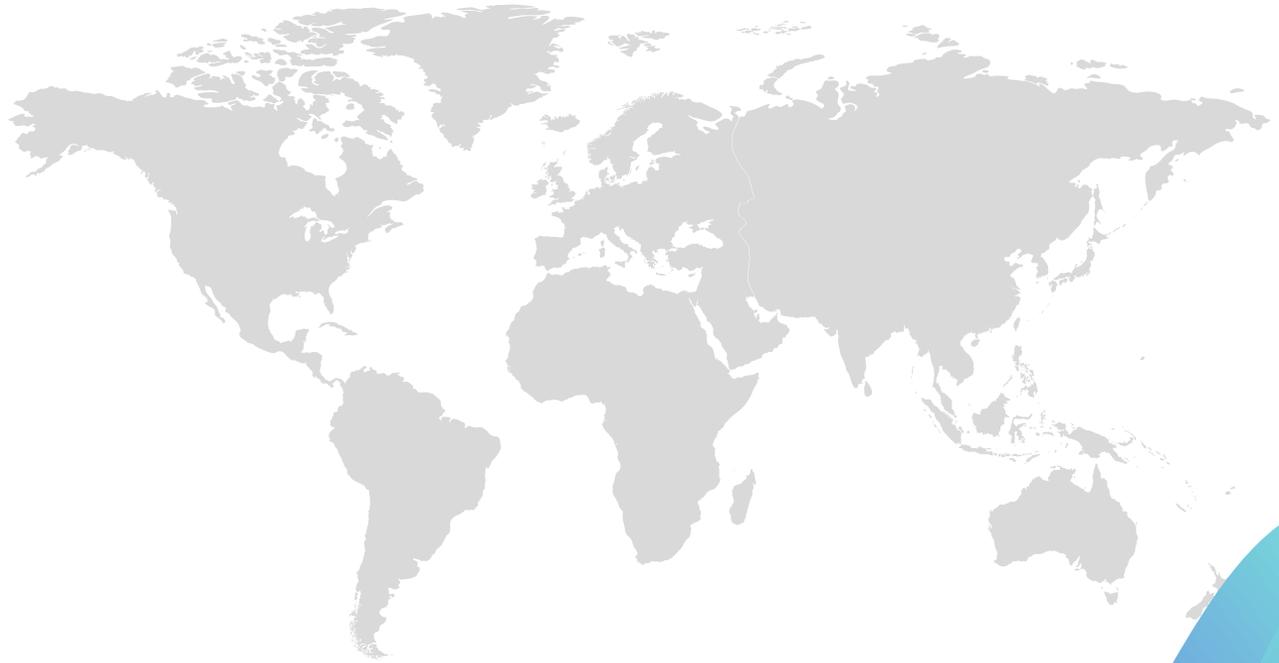

Unfortunately, being good at your job doesn't guarantee that you will be a good leader or manager. Yes, you were good enough to get promoted but being a manager has challenges you never dealt with when you were an employee. The transition to management isn't just a promotion and a pay raise—it's a shift into a new type of role that requires new skill sets and you are bound to trip up along the way when you are first starting out. What matters most is how quickly you can formulate a plan and learn from those mistakes. The session will give you an insight into the 10 common mistakes that newly transitioned managers and essential techniques tips on how to avoid them.

In many instances, new managers have not been trained in how to deliver constructive feedback and they are unduly concerned that any critical conversations will turn people against them. This webinar will benefit those who have transitioned into a new management role with tips and tools for engaging, motivating and building a high performance teams.

Who Should Attend ?

Managers and supervisors who have recently been promoted, those taking on new responsibilities, those with little or no formal training — even seasoned professionals needing a refresher — will benefit from the ideas, techniques, and tools offered in this powerful program.
